Sarah Hadsell Ms. Elmore Pre - Ap English I 1 May 2014 Books were taken away to cause peace not instability. When books are reintroduced to Montag after years of burning them he is finally able to think straight. Montag used to burn books for the good of society, but once he got The Bible he could finally see his society for what it is. In the excerpt from the novel Fahrenheit 451 Ray Bradbury utilizes personification, similes, and repetition to convey Montag's chaotic changing emotional state throughout the subway ride, because of the books he begins to think for himself. In the first paragraph similes and personification are used to show how his mental state is beginning to show change. In a flashback he remembers the first time he thought for himself "The night I kicked the pill bottle in the dark, like kicking a buried mine" (Bradbury 1). In this scene he starts to realize that there is something wrong with his society. How it was no big deal the his wife, Mildred had just tried to kill herself. His views on everything about society changed this night. He realizes that he wan... In Ray Bradbury's Fahrenheit 451, members of society live in a dystopia. The society is framed around the ideology that all man shall be equal in all aspects of life. In an effort to keep the status quo the government leverages different methods of political control. In Ray Bradbury's Fahrenheit 451 the political control that is leveraged educates that man must make sacrifices to their individual rights to coexist in an inhumane society. In Fahrenheit 451, the government uses the political act of censorship of texts to ensure that all are at the same level of intellectual ability. While Montag is speaking to Faber, the conversation turns to the reason for this controlling act. Bradbury writes, "'Do you know why books such as this are so important? Because they have quality. And what does the word quality mean? To me it means texture. This book has pores. It has features. This book can go under the microscope. You'd find life under the glass, steaming past in infinite profusion'" (Bradbury 79). Bradbury enlists the use of personification of a book having "pores" as it represents information and depth the author's use of personification enlightens the reader regarding the reasons the government burns books, which is for the control of the content and information they provide. The in-depth information and messages that are contained within books and other media create disputation and as such, allows certain individuals to excel in the ascertainment of knowledge, in Archive Photos/Moviepix/Getty Images Many examples of personification occur in Ray Bradbury's dystopian novel "Fahrenheit 451," and most of them have to do with the violent power that the government exercises over its citizens. For example, early in the book some jet planes fly overhead, "whistling a single note" over the entire sky. Given the fact that nuclear war is imminent in the story, this is definitely a menacing whistle, and it adds to the fear that the characters feel. Some of the examples of personification in the story reveal the inner feelings of the main characters. For example, Guy Montag's eyes feel a hunger to look at something, or even anything. This lack of visual stimulation is a source of frustration for Montag and others in the book, and using this expression shows how deep the frustration runs. When the bell rings in the firehouse later, it "kick[s] itself" 200 times. Using this verb to express the ring shows that there is frustration even within the authority itself, as the bell has to spur itself to ring in this unusual way. Personification is a literary device that gives human abilities to inanimate objects or, in some cases, animals. The general purpose is to lend a human degree of emotion to the narration of the story by adding the feeling to the object, as opposed to just stating the mood of the day. MORE FROM REFERENCE.COM
